

Are You Horse Show Challenged?

Two riders prove you can overcome show day disasters.

By Cindy Hale

June 2007

Horse shows are full of challenges that go far beyond deciphering the hieroglyphics on an entry form. If you're a competitor, you may also have to deal with a frisky horse, unmitigated chaos in the schooling ring and a class schedule that extends into the next time zone. By the end of the day, you may wonder why you thought riding in a horse show was a fun idea. To help you keep your sanity—and your zest for competing—a couple of your fellow horse show addicts share their enlightening experiences.

For the full article, pick up the June 2007 issue of HORSE ILLUSTRATED.

Do you like this excerpt? Subscribe Now to read more like it.