

HorseChannel Newswire

Neglected New York Thoroughbreds finding new homes; Equine therapy center struggling with lack of hay; New Jersey exhibit celebrates the state's horse culture

October 19, 2009

2010 World Equestrian Games

Horse Park ready for thousands

Six evening outdoor concerts are planned for downtown Frankfort during the 16-day Alltech FEI World Equestrian Games in 2010 at the Kentucky Horse Park in Lexington. From The State Journal. Read more >>

Equine Welfare

New Homes and New Hope for Some Neglected Horses

One horse is being retrained to become a hunter-jumper in Virginia. From The New York Times. Read more >>

In Other News

Horse ranch helping autistic children running out of hay

As soon as a child with autism walks onto the trail leading up to the Connections Therapeutic Riding Center ranch, their life begins to change. From 9News. Read more >>

Horse Therapy Helps Dugard Recover

In a People magazine article about former kidnapping victim Jaycee Dugard, a family spokeswoman said they are using horse therapy as part of the reunification process. From KCRA. Read more >>

Uncovering a Rich Equine History

The average New Jerseyan may have as much trouble identifying the state animal (the horse) as the state dance (the square dance). From The New York Times. Read more >>

BLM begins another horse roundup

After a one-day delay due to muddy conditions, workers with the U.S. Bureau of Land Management on Friday began gathering the first of a planned total of about 200 wild horses from the McCullough Peaks area. From The Billings Gazette. Read more >>

Yesterday's News >>